State funding cuts shrink classroom construction plans

By WAYNE DUCOMB JR.

Unavailability of state educational finance commission funds prompted the Hancock County School Board Saturday to tentatively request its school board reduce the scope of a districtwide classroom construction project.

A proposed $800,000 project would have added six classrooms at Hancock North (Central), four at Gulfview Elementary School and two at Charles B. Murphy Elementary School.

Woodrow Lader, a board member, reported that HNC will not provide funds for the construction project.

Archibuteo, John Mykoyk of Pass Christian recommended four of the six HNC classrooms be eliminated from the plan to effectively reduce costs.

Lader said the revised project would cost the district about $610,000.

"Six more classrooms at HNC won't even relieve overcrowding pressures there because we will still have to use the trailers," (portable temporary classroom buildings), he stated.

Mykoyk explained, "I suggested that four rooms be eliminated at HNC because that plan has the most rooms. If we have to cut costs in this project, this is the logical place to cut."

Mykoyk reported he has completed about 90 percent of the classroom plans. Regarding a recent civil suit filed against the school board by State Attorney General Bill Allan, charging that school board misappropriated funds in rebuilding Gulfview after a tornado damaged the school almost two years ago, the board approved paying Gulfview Attorney Robert E. Drake $14,000 and George C. Phillips of Bay St. Louis $10,000.

Mykoyk and Bay firm are handling the case. The board also approved paying $10,000 to the board member, Education Billy G. Sills, and finance board member Tom Lader.

Mykoyk said the board will regularize the case at the March 14 meeting. He said the board will also regularize the case at the March 14 meeting.

Bay Council speeds up Leonhard well repairs

By BRENT MACEY

An increase in demand for water during last summer months coupled with the need to service water to a developing subdivision in the heart of the city forced Bay Council members Thursday to step up their pace on repair work needed on the Leonhard Street well.

The council contracted James Chintche, a Bay St. Louis engineer, for the job of supervising work on the well repairs.

Council members informed Chintche they wanted the well to be "shut-lined." They directed him to draw up bid specifications for the project and have the specifications approved by the State Board of Health.

Chintche said shut lining will entail placing another screen down the well inside the existing well screen.

The second screen will prevent sand from infiltrating the water system, a problem which has caused the well pump to burn out several times in the past year.

He anticipated the well can be restored to pump 450 gallons per minute.

Councilman Gene Taylor stated another well will hopefully be drilled next year when the council has more money.

Water demand is expected to increase even more in the future as construction of Bay Cove Marina Village subdivision develops.

The city Tuesday agreed to supply that subdivision with sewerage and water.

The action followed bitter complaints from residents who have accused the city of neglecting the well.

At the Tuesday meeting, H.D. Finlay, Jr., president of the Engman Avenue subdivision, said he was paying taxes to the city for the well.

"We were promised water sewerage, improved streets and fire protection," he stated, "and in the area is insufficient fire hydrants are not being maintained, and that fire insurance rates are higher than they are in non-annexed areas of Bay St. Louis."

"I think the city has had plenty of time to do something about this. We have been paying taxes for 15 years and all we have gotten out of it is four street lights."

Taylor, who argued to allow Finlay to speak when Finlay was not listed on the agenda, replied, "We will not have to spend one penny to connect the subdivision."

That expense will be paid by the developers, he noted.

"We are looking at new source of revenue."

At the meeting Taylor stated he felt future residents in the county's portion of the subdivision should have to pay more than those living within Bay St. Louis proper.

The dividing line between the city and the county within the subdivision is Engman Avenue.

West of Engman Avenue, developers are planning a marina townhouse complex. The area east of Engman Avenue is slated for development.

Both areas will be connected to city utilities.

Taylor proposed having residents in the county portion of the subdivision pay an additional fee of $100 per lot.

A motion to approve that rate for county residents was passed unanimously by the board, with Board President Wilmer Skiffington absent.

Don Heston, who argued against it, had no complaints about the increased rates for county residents.

Following the Thursday meeting, Taylor noted he hopes the city will build an entirely new well next year for future demand.

Bill Johnson, head of the Utility Department, stated the city will be needing a new well in the future, regardless of whether or not the subdivision is serviced by the city.

In other business Thursday, the council approved Chintche's recommendation that, Neelco Brothers Construction Company of Long Beach be employed as contractors for the recreational portion of the 1981 Small Cities Project.

The company submitted a low bid of $25,000 for renovation of two tennis courts, construction of a basketball court, and construction of other miscellaneous items at the Washington Street Park.

Finalization of the contract between Bay St. Louis and the construction firm will depend on housing and urban development approval of the plan.

In other business, the council accepted a recommendation from the Southern Mississippi Chapter of the Project for the Preservation of the Gulf of Mexico Marine Mammals.

That project is a joint effort of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and the Mississippi Department of Wildlife, Fisheries and Forestry.

Hashish possession charge filed against Bay resident

By ELLIS CUEVAS

A Bay St. Louis man was arrested Friday night for possession of hashish, Hancock Sheriff's Department Investigator Alvin Lader said Saturday.

Jail records indicate that John A. Bilbo, 26, of 711 Street, is charged for possession of hashish. He was released on a $2,500 bond.

He is scheduled to appear before Justice Court Judge Bruce Neale for a preliminary hearing.

Bilbo was arrested by Lader and David Murtagh, an auxiliary deputy.

In other police activities, Hancock Sheriff Ronald A. Peterson Saturday reported a Waveland resident stopped by a Waveland Police Department patrolman Friday night is jailed in lieu of $50,000 bond on numerous charges.

Peterson said, "He is a Stueffel Jr. of Laffite Drive was stopped by Patrolman Chuck Thomas and apparently began to scuffle with the officer."

Stueffel is charged by Waveland for assault on a police officer, resisting arrest, driving under the influence, and destruction of city property. He is scheduled to appear before Waveland City Judge Lucien Gex on Thursday for those charges, Lader noted.

Another preliminary hearing is scheduled before Neale on Mar. 17 in three counts of assault on police officers involving Lader, Murtagh and Fred Keel, an auxiliary Hancock Deputy, Peterson added.

A passerby saw the problems the officer was having, so he used the police radio to summon help. Investigator Lader and Murtagh responded because they were in the immediate vicinity," Peterson stated.

The incident occurred after Waveland police received a call at 10:13 p.m. reporting an accident at U.S. 90 and Nicholson Avenue which officer James responded to according to a Waveland police department spokesman.

Money Talk

By Normie Barnes

Several new changes have been made to Individual Retirement Accounts (IRAs) and Keogh plans. These changes make more people eligible for these shelter programs.

For many people, IRAs and Keogh plans represent a way to save money for retirement. Taxes on the saved or invested income are deferred until the money is withdrawn for retirement, when most people fall into a lower tax bracket.

The current administration has enlarged the Individual Retirement Account and Keogh Plan programs so that virtually all working Americans are eligible for IRAs. This doubles the number of people eligible and, in some cases, means that individuals may now have an employee-sponsored program and an IRA.

Regardless of any other pension plan, an employee may now also set aside up to $2,000 a year in a self-initiated IRA bank account. Two-income families may deposit up to $4,000 a year ($2,000 for each person).

A nonworking spouse can participate in the program by having the working spouse deposit money in two IRA accounts up to a total of $2,250 for both accounts. A divorced, nonworking spouse may now deposit alimony payments as earned income into an IRA.

Money deposited into an IRA is not subject to federal taxes until the time of withdrawal. Depositors may not begin withdrawals until age 59½; they must, however, begin withdrawals by the time they are 70½.

Self-employed persons can also contribute money to their Keogh plans. Previously, self-employed people were allowed to deposit up to $7,500 or 15 percent of their income, whichever was less, each year in this tax-deferred retirement account. The 15 percent limit will remain in effect, but the maximum amount which can be saved yearly has been increased to $15,000.

Both the IRA and Keogh programs carry severe penalties for early withdrawal, and the saved money cannot be borrowed against or used as collateral.

Both programs offer good inducements to get people to contribute regularly to a planned savings program. By increasing eligibility and the amounts of money which can be saved, these accounts can help relieve pressure on the Social Security system, and stimulate people in middle and upper income brackets to save for their future retirement.

The accounts are long-term savings programs, and individuals who will need to withdraw money before the age of 59 should consider a different type of savings program. Those people who plan to open an IRA or Keogh account should also shop around, as different banks and other financial institutions offer varying interest rates.

Coast Guard to investigate rig disaster

A joint Coast Guard and National Transportation Safety Board Marine Board of Investigation convened in Washington, D.C., to begin probing the Ocean Ranger Mobile Offshore Drilling Unit disaster, which claimed 84 lives off the coast of Newfoundland Monday, Feb. 15.

Admiral John B. Hayes, Commandant of the Coast Guard, said the board is being chaired by Rear Admiral Henry H. Bell of the Coast Guard. Other board members are Coast Guard Captains Peter J. Cronk and R.T. Blomquist, along with Ralph Johnson and Paul Ebbesen of the National Transportation Safety Board.

The oil well drilling rig was registered in the United States. It went down 12 miles east of St. John's, Newfoundland, during an Atlantic storm. There were 24 U.S. and Canadian citizens aboard the rig.

Cooking up a storm

By Katy McGuire Cairre

What's better on a cold, rainy day than a steaming bowl of soup? Thick, nourishing soup with plenty of hot French bread and butter—I ask you! That's why the recent rainy weather found me stirring the pot about making chicken broth in one pot and simmering a chunk of beef in another pot. That's when I started getting hungry for a bowl of bean soup, so I started on that project as well.

Bean soup is a tradition of long standing in our nation's capital, appearing on the menu of the White House and Senate restaurants, day in and day out. It's a comfort food, but it can be made in a variety of ways.

I was so decreed many years ago, so I've been told, that the soup of the future will be the soup of the house. The late Joseph E. Cannon of Illinois had his "bean soup" for a birthday. The soup had been made in the White House kitchen.

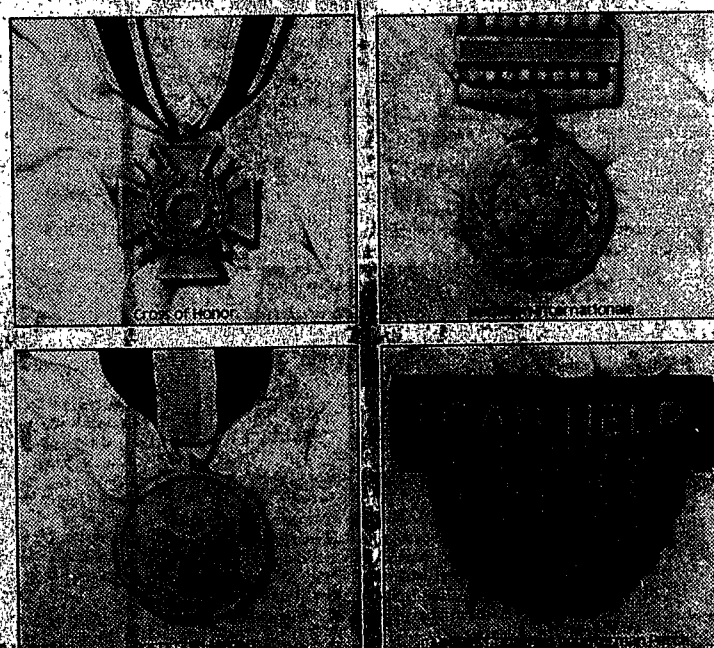

That's why, on rainy days, I'm a chicken and a bean soup. It's a comfort food, but it can be made in a variety of ways.

I feel that beans of all sorts are more digestible when cooked by this old-time method, but many cooks prefer to bring the beans to a boil, let them sit for an hour, and then cook.

I also feel that pouring hot water over the beans makes them more tender—perhaps it's just an old grandma's trick.

Anyway, it's a fun project, and it's a good one. I'll be turning the heat down on that project as well.

Beans soup is a tradition of long standing in our nation's capital, appearing on the menu of the White House and Senate restaurants, day in and day out. It's a comfort food, but it can be made in a variety of ways.

They're only as good as the people who earn them.

It's a common question: "How can I earn more money?" The answer is simple: "By working for a company that pays you well." That's why we at Dinto Supply are so proud of our employees. We know that our employees are the ones who make our company successful. And we know that our employees are the ones who deserve the best. That's why we pay them well. We pay them well because we know that they are the ones who make our company successful. And we know that they are the ones who deserve the best. That's why we pay them well.

Wednesday planet alignment to have little effect on Earth

"No, California will not shut off into the Pacific Ocean on March 10, but if it does, it will be caused by some other force than the alignment of the planets in our solar system," says Dr. William Hughes, chairman of physics and astronomy at the University of Southern Mississippi.

"A 'Doomsday' prediction was made some eight years ago in 'The Jupiter Effect,' a book by British authors John Gribbin and Stephen Plagemann.

"In the book, the authors said that because of an alignment of the planets in our solar system occurring in March of 1982, the resulting gravitational stress would cause major earthquakes on earth.

"The prediction has led to speculation that the much publicized San Andreas faultline, which lies under California, would give way and much of that state would sink beneath the Pacific.

"Wednesday at 6:00 a.m., one hour before sunrise, five of the earth's sister planets will be visible across the sky. Mercury will appear on the eastern horizon.

"Venus will be 20 degrees above the horizon in the east. Uranus can not be seen, but will be 12 degrees above the eastern horizon.

"Jupiter will appear 10 degrees from the western horizon while Saturn will be at 4 degrees.

"Mars will be at 10 degrees and the moon will be close to the horizon in the west.

"All visible planets will be seen in the area of the sky roughly in the path of the sun and moon and will move across the southern sky at 15 degrees per hour.

Although the earth will be in a high tide situation, because of the nearly full moon, Dr. Hughes said, that the gravitational effects of the planetary alignment will have a minuscule effect on the earth.

"The sun contains 99.9 percent of all matter in our solar system yet it contributes less gravitational pull on the earth than our moon," Hughes said.

"The moon is the major factor in the cycle of the tides because of its proximity (to the Earth). The other planets are far too distant to have any major gravitational effects on the earth.

"This configuration of the planets will last most of March," he said. "The moon will appear at different stages and positions and will begin to 'rise' in the western sky as the days progress."

"Dr. Hughes pointed out that some knowledge of the heavens will be helpful in locating the planets. "They will not alien like a scene of marbles," he said.

"As the moon 'rises' the planets will appear in close proximity. The planets, dates and closeness to moon observed from moonrise to moonset are: Mars, March 1, 2 degrees south of the moon; Saturn, March 1, 2 degrees south; Jupiter, March 1, 4 degrees south; and Uranus, the 10 degrees south."

According to Hughes, Jupiter, Mars and Saturn will be the most interesting planets to observe.

"Venus is the brightest star in our sky and is easily recognizable," Hughes said. "Jupiter will appear white and will outshine Mars and Saturn. Mars is second in brightness to Jupiter and will appear red. Saturn will be white."

"With very good binoculars, trained well on a stationary object, observers should be able to make out the rings of Saturn and four of the major moons of Jupiter," Hughes concluded.

COLD DAMAGE

The recent cold weather in January has damaged many landscape plants in Mississippi, and gardeners are concerned that some plants may die. In addition, they are curious about what care and maintenance should be given to these damaged plants to encourage their survival.

So the two questions at hand are: 1) are the plants going to die; and 2) what timely care should be given to encourage recovery?

The broadleaf evergreens were the most severely damaged. These include nymphaea, ligustrum, boxwood, photinia, pittosporum, and sweet olive. The foliage on most of these plants was severely damaged. As a result, the leaves have fallen off the plant, leaving bare branches which gives the appearance of a dead bush. However, most of these plants will not be dead. They will put out new growth as spring arrives. Tender new growths from last year may be killed and should be removed after spring greenup.

It is important for gardeners to realize that landscape shrubs in Mississippi have been under stress during the last two years due to the summer drought of 1980, and winter drought of 1980-81, and the summer drought of 1981. This resulted in extensive root damage and ultimately, a weakened plant. So many plants were in extremely poor condition when the cold weather hit in January 1982. Such weakened plants may not recover as a result of the combination of drought stress and the cold weather.

What To Do Right Now.

1. Wait and see how much of the plant greens up or sprouts in early spring. At that time, you can clearly see the dead twigs, which need to be removed. Pruning them too early might result in removing too much live wood which might be needed to strengthen the plant during the growing season.

2. Avoid over-fertilizing shrubs which are under stress. A limited root system and a weakened plant can use only so much fertilizer. Follow recommended rates very carefully. Over-fertilization will do more harm than good. 3. Learn a good lesson from this experience and be

County Agent's Notes

1. Ask your local Extension Home Economist for a copy of information sheet 204, entitled "Pruning Landscape Plants." This describes the techniques of proper pruning for a wide variety of landscape plants. 2. Many gardeners have asked about damaged foliage of shrubs and trees. Avoid using high nitrogen fertilizers on these plants. Damaged foliage could be cut using a sharp knife as soon as possible and before new growth begins. New shoot growth begins in early March. Foliage can be cut leaving as little as 3" remaining on the mother plant. Be sure to discard all cut foliage. Remove decaying debris around the base of the mother plant.

Remember, use a sharp knife to avoid shredding the foliage. Shredded foliage will turn brown and be very unsightly. In addition, the foliage which is cut with a dull knife will be more susceptible to disease.

MISSISSIPPI FORESTRY

By David Redisch
Hancock County Forester

Mississippi's forest cover is the most extensive in the South, and the generally dry weather pattern through early December has local and state forestry officials concerned about a record performance in the coming winter and spring months.

Forestry Commission records show that more than 200,000 acres were swept by uncontrolled fires during the 1980 fiscal year.

Some 20,750 of those acres were lost in Hancock County. Nine out of ten of these fires are man-caused, which provides us with the opportunity and challenge to drastically reduce this needless waste in our community.

There are number of ways everybody can help, for instance:

1. Be careful with children in the woods, such as warming fires and campfires. Make sure they are "dead" before leaving.
2. Use proper technique with all agricultural burning, such as burning of cotton and fields. There should always be a good, clean firebreak completely surrounding the area to be burned. Always use only local firewood for burning and follow the Commission's given firebreak guidelines. When should be attempted on days of extremely high fire danger.
3. Use prescribed fire where appropriate in valuable pine stands to eliminate or reduce undesirable hardwood species. When should be done with the advice of a professional forester.
4. Many firebreaks constructed in the past have been three plantings of pines. This is not a good practice. Construction and prescribed burning are both done by the Mississippi Forestry Commission for a fee.
5. Do not attempt back yard debris burning in days when the fire danger is high and never leave debris burning unattended.
6. Immediately call the sheriff or the nearest Mississippi Forestry Commission office if you spot someone starting a fire unlawfully. Be sure and get carrying numbers and as much information about the violator as possible.

To request fire or request other forestry assistance in Hancock County, the phone number is either 467-4726 or 465-7152.

The Mississippi Forestry Commission expects to have approximately $66,000 in federal funds available soon for small business grants to rural communities to assist them in obtaining needed firefighting equipment.

The grants will be issued under the Rural Community Fire Protection Program (RCFPP) as authorized under P.L. 94-163. This will be the seventh year Mississippi has received funds (roughly $1 million) which are limited to a maximum of $2,000 per community.

Communities or fire departments interested in securing one of the RCFPP grants would be well advised to take prompt action in this regard. Says Curt Fulgham, Fire Control Forester for the Commission:

Rural communities of under 10,000 population are eligible for the funds. Application forms may be secured from Curt Fulgham, Fire Control Forester, 900 Robert E. Lee Building, Jackson, MS 39201, or from Commission District Offices at Gulfport, Tupelo, Philadelphia, Bay Springs, Wiggins, Brookhaven, Rolling Fork and Ellott.

Completed applications must be returned to Fulgham by 5:00 p.m. April 12. All grants must be used by June 30 and must be in the form of a purchase order or possession by August 1, 1981.

Fire protection and other improvements of the forest department timberlands have been a priority of the state in the Magnolia State. And according to a recently published U.S. Forest Service technical report, timberlands have been producing a good return.

Mississippi, for instance, led the nation in the production of direct seedling (pole wood) completed during the 1980 fiscal year.

Other areas in which the Mississippi forestry effort has excelled include:

1. Fourth highest number of acres planted (155,014). Only Oregon, Florida and Georgia did more tree planting.
2. Second highest number of seedlings produced at State Forestry Nurseries (77.4 million). Louisiana Forestry Commission Nurseries produced 22.8 million.
3. Second place nationally in timber stand improvement on private and industrial lands (15,700 acres).
4. Fourth nationally in timber stand improvement on industrial lands (38,000 acres).
5. Eighth ranked nationally in timber stand improvement on non-federal public land such as 10th Sections (2,100 acres).
6. Fourth nationally in timber stand improvement done on all ownership (55,800 acres).

State Forester Dick Allen said that although he is certainly pleased with the state's national standing in forestry, there is still a great potential for even more improvement, especially on private, non-industrial owned timberlands.

"We've still got a tremendous backlog of 3 or 4 million acres of cut-over, unimproved timberland that must be treated to bring it back to full productivity," he declared.

Allen said Mississippi would not be facing a current shortage of operating funds in timberland was fully productive.

Information comes from the publication "ES-368 Forest Planting, Seedling and Silvical Treatments in the U.S.-1980 Report" published September, 1980.

Society lecturer to discuss spiritual, psychic powers

The Gulf Coast Federation of the Theosophical Society in America Tuesday is presenting Francisco (Bing) Escudero in a public lecture on "Spiritual and Psychic Powers."

Escudero, a Philippines native, will speak at 7 p.m. in the Charcoal Room of the Rowley Inn, 1725 Tulane Ave., New Orleans, La.

"There may be very important distinctions between spiritual perception and psychic vision," the speaker said.

"The first deals with principles, the second with phenomena and both are a form of awakening. We can protect ourselves and others by knowing the pitfalls and development potentials in these areas," he continued.

"Above all, we must learn to exercise our own powers with intelligence and compassion," he added.

Escudero has lectured widely in the U.S., Philippines and Canada for the Theosophical Society. His presentation will be followed by a question-and-answer session.

Free parking facilities are available at the motel where the dining room opens for dinner at 5 p.m.

For information, call Federation Secretary Katie M. Dreher evenings at 504-522-6540.

Black Methodists to mark 100th anniversary in Bay

The Valena C. Jones United Methodist Church in Bay St. Louis will celebrate 100 years of Methodism among Black people of the city Sunday, March 21.

The VCI Methodist Church here traces its beginnings to a small house on Washington Street where a group of former slaves first met in 1880, a church spokesman reported.

Rev. Arthur Lewis, pastor, said his congregation has issued a public invitation for the anniversary celebration planned for the afternoon of March 21.

"We are anxious to have members of the community join us on this gala occasion," Lewis added.
